The Archives for Women in Medicine presents:

Why Women Can't Be Doctors:
The Medieval Origins of Women's Marginal Status in Medicine

A lecture by Monica Green
Professor of History, Arizona State University
Countway Fellow, 2007-2008

Going back to the European Middle Ages (and beyond), historian Monica Green examines how women came to be non-authorities even in the field of medicine traditionally deemed most relevant to them: gynecology and obstetrics.

May 8, 2008, 4:30 - 5:30 pm, reception to follow
Countway Library, 10 Shattuck St, Boston
RSVP to ARM@hms.harvard.edu